ORIGINAL POETRY.

We are indebted to the Rev. Wm. Hamilton, of the Otoe and Omaha Mission, for the original and beautiful poem we publish to-day. Mr. Hamilton having been employed in the Indian mission service in Nebraska during the last fifteen years—is so intimately acquainted with the interesting subject presented, as he is with the harmonious numbers in which it is exhibited to the reader.

argued, that true thanksgiving [illegible] nature but a [illegible] even when not expressing [illegible] of cold water—the fruits wherever received, would [illegible] sense of gratitude [illegible] thanksgiving, to Him who provides rich blessings.

[illegible] ourselves, we could not recollect [illegible] who was continually receiving [illegible] us, yet never showed any sense of gratitude, much less would God approve our conduct, while we were continually enjoying the riches of his bounty, without one grateful emotion towards him who daily supplied our wants.

In regard to the second head, it was shown that the object of thanksgiving was the author of the kindness shown, and that man, as the instrument, was also the object of gratitude. To illustrate this, reference was made to [illegible] of [illegible], and the wise provision of Providence in making us dependent on one another, and thus making it necessary for us to assist [illegible] loving.

But the special object of our thanksgivings was God, the author of all our mercies—of all our enjoyments.

In reference to the third head, [illegible] the Duty of Thanksgiving, it was observed, that we were daily receiving favors at his hand—what we need it is his giving—a being of infinite goodness and power. That he had a right to expect it of us, he [illegible] that we were dependent on him, that [illegible] as it was through the governing providence of God, that the territory was now a part of our domain, and that we were happy. Others were [illegible] it, but God gave it to our nation, and which saying has brought here, [illegible] the height of ingratitude, and to feel and express our thankfulness.

A hymn was then sung to the purport [illegible] of our gratitude to God, that it was an acknowledgment that he was [illegible] to us, and his kindness had no bounds [illegible] duty obligation to love him, and [illegible] ourselves to him and, that if we did not [illegible] we should be [illegible] of his love.

In conclusion, it was noted, that [illegible] these temporal mercies were [illegible] only bestowed upon us, but one of which we were worthy. [illegible] he gave us Heaven's richest gift, in the person of his [illegible] which might be call [illegible] being grateful, and [illegible] a [illegible] we not [illegible] the [illegible] and the government of the [illegible] of the earth, [illegible] we were [illegible] to the rich and abundant [illegible] of and poverty our Freedom from the [illegible] the power [illegible] [illegible] the right of [illegible] and the [illegible] of [illegible] land.

an unlimited pre-emption title. The pre-emptor, in the first place, is secure against the truthless speculator; in the second place, it will encourage the rapid settlement of the territory; in the third place, it keeps the money in the country, that comes in with the emigration, until there is a surplus of produce raised in the country, for a distant market, thereby, keeping up a free circulation of money in the country; giving health and tone to mechanical agricultural and commercial pursuits; and, in the fourth place, the lands will be settled up, by industrious farmers, instead of being entered by foreign speculators, and to be held back for a high price, until the country looks more like a barren wilderness, than well cultivated fields.

Fellow Citizens, there are a thousand other arguments that might be adduced, but space forbids any more being offered at this time. I will now conclude this article, by making a few remarks in reference to self: First—in politics, I am a Democrat by trade, a few months over thirty-five years old, six feet high, weigh one hundred and seventy pounds, have a wife and three children. Expected to be esteemed, beloved and opposed by all, whose interests my principles strike, but I want it to be distinctly understood, that I shall walk this race through, using the language of Rochester—"That there is no such word as the Lexicon of Youth as fate."

this quotation for a sake of p. all out, a very common error, namely, that the sap goes down into the roots to winter:— Instead of this, the sap pervades usually all parts of a tree alike, and while covered with leaves, these keep up a constant drain or escape. When the leaves fall, al-through vegetation has ceased, the roots still absorb a small quantity, and as their is no escape the leaves, the vessels of the tree gradually become filled or distended, so that on the approach of warm weather, stimulating activity the least wound is followed by a flow of the sap. As soon as the new leaves expand, as a general rule, his flow from incisions ceases, in consequence of the drain afforded in other direction.

Now it usually happens that removing the tree in the spring cuts off in a measure the supply from the roots at the very moment it is most wanted,—an evil quiet as great as that resulting from any diminished supply in consequence of fall planting. One correspondent speaks of the evil of "a new cold soil;"—are we to understand from this that the plant has warmed the bed in which it stood, and that it is chilled, like a human being, by removal to a fresh bed?
Is not the "new soil" as relatively cold in spring as in autumn? He speaks of life being "destroyed by evaporation"—this must refer to long distances; yet trees may be sent thousand of miles if well packed, with nearly or quite the safety attending their removal to the next farm. Ample experience has proved this to be true. Why are we not all allowed to take the same pains in moving the roots and carrying the earth upon them for autumn as well as for spring transplanting?

But throwing theory aside,— we have in the course of our practice set out many ten thousand of trees of various sizes, both in autumn and in spring, and we are satisfied that more, by at least twenty-fold, depends on a good careful work, and especially on the subsequent culture, than on the season of the year so much lost, if it were not for the Hippie to be thrown out or ruined by frost, and the danger to bulk dry roots from the cold of winter we think the advantages would decidedly preponderate in favor of autumn, more especially because it is not accompanied with the shock we have already spoken of at the very moment the trees should commence to grow vigorously. We have never found hardy trees to succeed better, if as well, other things being the same, as when carefully dug up in autumn and well laid in till spring when they were set out without the above mentioned check.

French Burr Mill Stones.

NEARLY TWENTY YEARS EXPERIence in the Mill furnishing business in St. Louis, (commencing at the workman's bench) enables us to judge correctly of the quality of burr best adapted to milling in the West. In obtain that quality, we have found it necessary to visit the quarries in France, and there make selections. Our stock this year was selected at the quarries by one of the firm, and supplied left with the proprietors, that we buy, when we order, be certain of obtaining the desired quality. For successful milling, the practical miller and millwright can appreciate the importance of this arrangement. Our stock is always large, and any desired temper and texture of burr can be obtained without delay.

BOLTING CLOTHS.

To obtain the quality of Bolting Cloth best suited to milling in the West, we have had the greatest difficulty. Overbolting bolts by last grinding, and the large quantities of spring wheat and oats ground to destroy to the ordinary Cloth. Our consultation of mill owners and millers here are so frequent, we found it necessary to obtain finer and stronger Cloths, or subject ourselves to a repetition of telling an interior article. We laid before the man the important objections in their flours, and a superior article was ordered to be made. AT BELLEVIEW.

...of the citizens of Bellevue held in the school room of the Mission house, on Saturday, December 9th. The Governor remarked, that he was aware that intense excitement prevailed at different points respecting the location of the Capitol, and that large sums of money were being expended at these points in anticipation of its location, and that disappointment necessarily awaited all except one—all felt a deep anxiety in the issue of the question, involving so many, and such weighty interests. Said that about two weeks previously he had made up his mind to locate the Capitol at Omaha City—but owing to improper influences brought to bear upon him in the course his determination, he made up his mind that he would not locate it at that place, and concluded by saying that he had not made up his mind where it should be located, or in what relation Omaha City should stand to Bellevue—but still that if Bellevue would nominate one man for Councilman and two men for the House of Representatives, who would sustain his administration—and not vote for the removal of the Capitol from the place where he gave it a lodge it—and not use his influence to have the Capitol removed, he would be willing to have it located and be nailed up in its place.

Speech of Mr. A. W. Hollister, Esq.

Mr. Chairman: As ... of the ... of the circular containing falsehoods purporting to have been addressed to a Mr. Gray, and signed by T. B. Cuming, and as His Excellency, the Governor, has pronounced the letter a forgery, I feel myself called upon to explain why my name is so associated. The original letter I have seen. It is in possession of a man, whose very name, forbids even the suspicion of deceit or fraud, as far as my will, I have not a doubt as to its authenticity. Maj. Hepner, (you all know him) who is well acquainted with Governor Cuming's hand-writing, (here Mr. Cuming interrupted the speaker by saying in a loud wrathful tone, "I did not come here to listen to my character and conduct upon myself, and shall not remain.") Mr. Hollister requested him to say, that he was obliged to call witness to show how well upon the supposition of forgery, but the Governor left the room. Mr. H. then asked if he should continue, and some loud cries of "go on go on," he resumed. You all know Maj. Hepner, you know his integrity and veracity. He says he will swear to its genuineness in a Court of Justice, if necessary, and do you think he, a government officer, would commit the dangerous act of forgery? Many of you are acquainted with Dr. McMahon. Will he forge? will he rob the mail? But gentlemen, the damning proof of the authenticity of this precious document, and of the treachery of T. B. Cuming, is not alone in the mind of those who have seen the original letter, which shall be produced at the proper time, but you see it in the flaming, lurking, and hard, evasive explanation you have just listened to. The letter was pronounced a complete forgery. Then His Excellency, had a false recollection of writing to Mr. Gray, about the 20th of November, which letter he imagined was dropped by the carrier on his way to the Post-Office. Then the letter written to Mr. Gray was sent for, and in due time would arrive and explain the base conspiracy, who would on the eve of an election concoct a base scheme to effect their ends. Such disjointed declarations are ...

Gentlemen: The letter would not ... been exposed, but for a point in a conversation I had with ... and Col. Greene a few evenings since. I had the copy in my pocket. The point ... should be sent as ... county; I re... determine ... of the people of Bellevue. I was answered in effect, that our separate representation depended upon that. To this I said, that Governor Cuming could do as he pleased. Though I had the evidence of the determination of the Governor to locate the Capitol at Omaha, yet they attempted to deceive me. They attempted to make me believe matters were as undecided as ever. Then I quoted from the letter a sentence or two; "Where did you get your authority," said Mr. Cuming. "My authority is good I answered, and the next morning out came this, robbing the mails, breaking seals, and forging charge, that His Excellency now wishes to have omitted in this handbill.

And now he comes among us and tells us: Nominate my men, nominate men pledged to support me; nominate men pledged not to oppose me and my cherished schemes; men who will not oppose the Capitol when once located—and will cast your ballots for a Nebraska Democrat as Delegate to Congress.

Good God! are our hands to be bound; are our mouths to be closed! are we to be slaves! are we to move, breathe, and act at the bidding of this man for the benefit of a separate district? I know not what you will do, but for myself, I had rather be swallowed up by Omaha, I would rather see Bellevue sink than accept to freemen such slavish conditions.

In reply to the proposition in the above speech, suspending the freedom of the elective franchise upon a pledge to use it as he dictated—Commodore Stephen Decatur proper said in a strain of indignant eloquence remarked, That he was a descendant of revolutionary sires, whose blood had been shed in the cause of human freedom, and who fought against the enemies of their country in order to secure the very privileges which he was contending for some said that by every principle of right we were justly entitled to a separate representative district, and that if it could be given us without taking away our freedom, right would take place, and that a district were to cost us our liberties, it would not be worth the purchase. Said he wished what was right, or nothing at all.

Mr. D. said he thought the age of discussion had passed away, and that the right to vote as a man pleased, was granted whenever the privilege of voting at all, was granted. And that there would be no use in having a nominal representation if we did not have one in reality and ... he, in the ... and telling men. Mr. D. thought there was still enough for an election only now, as it was before the Hon. ... that great was ... and have ... it was ... said that he would not see what ... was in the formality of an election, if those who did were to follow the dictates of the Executive. If that system were to be adopted, we might just as well dispense with the trouble and cost of electing members to represent us and consent to be ruled by the will of a ... grant. ...

... Hollister ... the ... Governor left the room. Mr. H. then asked if he should continue, and some loud cries of "go on go on," he resumed. You all know Maj. Hepner, you know his integrity and veracity. He says he will swear to its genuineness in a Court of Justice, if necessary, and do you think he, a government officer, would commit the dangerous act of forgery? Many of you are acquainted with Dr. McMahon. Will he forge? will he rob the mail? But gentlemen, the damning proof of the authenticity of this precious document, and of the treachery of T. B. The Territorial Government.

The organization of our Territorial Government is a subject of all-absorbing interest to the people of Nebraska—one in which every citizen is deeply concerned. The humblest squatter, as well as the capitalist, and the politician, have an equal right to insist upon an organization in which the principles of equity and justice are fully recognized and obeyed. It is plainly to be seen that justice requires that the distant portions of the Territory, as well as the near, have a right to be included in the privileges attending the establishment of civil government in this country. A righteous government requires that the interests of all should be consulted, who ever may be their constituents, or wherever their place may be—such are the obvious interests to be consulted at the very commencement of the government. But future as well as present interests demand consideration in the establishment of our Territorial government. Time, policy, and every principle of right dictates that the Capitol should be located where, according to the best calculations, the most central and accessible point, would be for the whole Territory, and not that portion of it only, which is now settled.

If the principle now asserted be true, it follows that there are other interests besides the present and the visible, that should be taken into account, and would be by those who had the best interests of the Territory at heart, whenever an important step is to be taken affecting those interests. In relation to the principle upon which the operations of the Executive of this Territory are founded, we are at a loss to see anything like equity and justice. We think his principle has been, and now is, to make the interests of the Territory entirely subservient to the interests of himself and his friends, and that the interests of the people are to be made subservient if not utterly sacrificed. If we look to the manner in which the Territory has been divided it will appear that great injustice has been done to many portions, if not the whole Territory. In the first place, the Territory has been divided in so ... that ... hundred legal voters from the privilege of exercising the elective franchise. POULTRY.

Everything connected with poultry now-a-days has a peculiar interest, we give the following sensible remarks from an English agricultural journal:

First of the roost and nest house. The floor should be sprinkled with ashes, or loam, pulverized peat, or fine charcoal, and the floor should be cleaned every week.

The yard should contain a grass plat, some fine gravel, slaked lime, dry ashes, and pure water. The nest should be lined with moss, fleath or straw. Evidently the Dorkings are the best breed; they will lay an average of 185 eggs each per annum. Fowls with black legs are best for roasting, while those of white legs are best for boiling. If you want them to sit early, leave the eggs under them. Fowls in their native habits never lay more eggs than they can hatch. Remember that no success can be expected from poultry-keeping, if their house be damp, cold and mean or badly ventilated; if their food does not approximate to that which they can get in a state of nature, with a mixture of animal or vegetable food; if the water they drink be stagnant; the drainage of the manure heap, &c., or if the stronger and handsomest be not breed from.

Flax Culture at the West

One of the most important and [illegible] establishments for the interest of the Western farmer is that of the "Dayton Flax Company," the object of which is to dress flax upon an extensive scale by the Buchanan process. The works are situated about one mile east of the center of the city, and are now rapidly approaching completion. Messrs Thos. Kimber, Jr., and Chas. Hartshorne, of Philadelphia, are the inventors or proprietors of the patent for the United States. J. N. Gossman, Esq., is a proprietor and the manager of the Dayton establishment. Mr. G. is a very intelligent, thought-strong, practical gentleman who has had much experience in the growing of flax and manufacture of oil. In accompanying his services I think the company were extremely fortunate. I was not a little surprised at seeing the accumulation of immensities of flax straw. The yards and buildings can contain upward of 2000 tons, and yet this is nearly put up in stacks or ricks. Four of these ricks are now completed, each of which is 30 feet long, 20 feet high, 30 feet wide at the bottom. This flax is mostly the produce of three of the adjoining counties. The company pay $10 per ton for all the flax-straw that comes to them straight and bound, and $5 per ton for the broken.

Mr. Grosvenor informed me that he would probably raise steam and commence operations in the course of the next month, when he has promised me he will send you some account of his success.

There is now cultivated and grown in Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois and other Western States, tens of thousands of tons of flax, for the seed alone—the fibre is suffered to go to waste which if dressed would find a ready market at remunerating more. I hope the success of this enterprise may encourage the capitalists of Kentucky and Indiana to erect similar establishments in their respective [illegible]

TELEGRAPH OPERATORS.

Fiddlers from time immemorial have been considered among the most eminent liars extant, and had it not been for the daguerreotype art, the number of fiddlers would have been still more numerous, and erstwhile they would have been plenty enough, and the bowels of the defunct cat would still be unlikely agitated by the hair of the equine quadruped, were it not for the profession, telegraphic, which has called to its embrace every variety of liar, fool, fancy boy, fast man out of dimes, and prominence out of calling, which the world has ever produced. But among the latter class, there came one who was far, and now has made his mark upon the times, for he was truly a genius.

In nature he was not a Sampson, but in mind he was equal to Solomon. Descended from revolutionary sires, and basking upon his face and his person, in his thoughts and in his acts, the impress of his father's military greatness, he felt that he must re-kindle worthy the name and fame of the great Thomas family, and its head General Thomas Thomas, his paternal ancestor.

We shall not endeavor to depict the rise and revolt of his youthful brain, while young ambition holded sway within. He a fool in a nutshell, was thought of [illegible] his little head, [illegible] pleasantly [illegible] hope he threw down the mirror of his history and left "the line," leaving no line behind to tell the tale, and verse and "will for a newspaper" were leave for the pay of his work done Maxwell or Twine. Our only in the task, in brief, to state his rapid rise, from telegraph operator to "correspondent," from correspondent to Editor, and from Editor to "Acting Governor of Nebraska" and the realization of hopes by the entire Thomas family. It is thus, we conjured example of the success which awaits ambitious youth, in fancy, bright image, illustrating the effects of perseverance and sweet oil, but a true picture, a reflection of facts, which we have now to present to the reader.

Our Governor, the Honorable T. B. Cuming, is the embodiment of my picture, the eminent member of the Thomas family. His rise was rapid, but his fall like that of all other great men has been distinguished by the velocity of a Comet. One day standing in the majesty of his own mystery, hurling Caplet's, packing legislature, denying to large communities the right of representation, and giving it to uncivilized savages, old and dove, the right of voting at the Black Bird meet, or at any other point in Burt county, where the wandering polls may stop voting stock ship's, and wielding the power of a despot monarch, he is the admiration of women and sycophants. But the scene, how changed! His mystery has evaporated, and to him no longer is applicable the couplet:

"He rants in a mysterious way, His readers to perform."

For his bargains are exposed to the people, his own letters, in his own handwriting, are passed from hand to hand, and the million telegraph operator, begins to think the (as he has called them) frontier border men of Nebraska are quite wise enough for him. A petition for his removal from any office in the Territory has been abroad and it is signed by a large majority of the people, and must be laid weight with the President of the United States. At any rate, unless a successor disappointed, we shall have no par- of harmony throughout

We want here for our m of experience, of integ- ity, and as we believe from m of our heart, that the fel- now cumbering political wires ernor, [illegible] not only these ery other one, [illegible] cent and good [illegible] with [illegible] shall [illegible] to call for a new Governor and Secretary.

Mail.—Telegraph operators do not always make good Governors. And small men are [illegible] for Eastern than Western.

N. B.—Our picture gallery will continue from week to week. We have in our possession the portraits of several distinguished Colonels and Majors, which to be appreciated must be seen.

"The Latter Was."

Under this title the Bugle sounds the following sweet note for the Governor:

"Now this letter is either a base forgery, or it has been taken from the mail or at all events it has been opened contrary to law, and every rule of honor or propriety, and could the offender be detected would subject him to fine and imprisonment. There has been consequently, upon either horn of the dilemma base and unpardonable conduct exerted."

We maintain that, neither of the above positions are correct. In the first place the letter is no forgery, but a genuine production, from beginning to end. In the next place, it was not "taken from the mail" and not opened contrary to law. Nor did he violate no honor been violated, no rules of propriety violated. The letter was found in the public highway, unsealed, unopened, and to all appearances, unsorted for. It was open to the public gaze, and carelessly picked up by some one in whose path it happened to fall.

We contend that no one was to blame for picking up those papers in the street, no one can be harmed for reading it, and if reading it did any harm, it would be because its contents were erroneous.

Fontenelle, Dodge Co.

J. W. Richardson, Esq., Secretary of the Quincy Colony, called upon us lately and gave us a few items relating to the condition and prospects of that colony. At present, it consists of about thirty persons who came on and commenced the settlement late in the fall. Several houses have been erected, and various improvements are being pushed forward as fast as hands in their power to execute them. They have a beautiful location and will soon have a first class settlement. The projectors of the colony are religious and influential men and taken all, they are men of high moral attainments, and will be doubly the means of building up a community of which Nebraska might well be proud.

To the credit of that enterprising colony their election was carried off without the old of interfering claims, and hence the harmony that prevails.

The good people of Fontenelle, we understand, are highly of the intelligence of Mr. R. [illegible] from the [illegible] Representative of the interest which they are laboring to secure.

We hope our friends [illegible] success to proper and [illegible] responsible experiment. The [illegible] be succeeded by a [illegible] dred teachers in the spring. It [illegible] will be the looking to happy point of this company.

If this course be adopted and never lost sight of, we predict for it an extensive circulation and a good living.

S... WINTER VEGETABLES

...the growing, the proper pr... of winter vegetables ci... attention. It is possible, but so far as sorts and growth are concerned, the stock may be unexceptionable, which when wanted for the table, they may be of roots, dried and shriveled up—if the cabbage tribe, rotten.—This is all for the want of proper storing. A good dry cellar is the best place for storing roots, such as carrots, beets, ruta bagas parsnips, scorzonera or oyster plant, and turnips. If stored after the following manner, they will come out as wanted, as plump as when taken out of the ground.—

The tender, such as carrots, beets, and scorzonera, require taking up as soon as the leaves exhibit a yellow appearance, or before any very sharp frost while parsnips may remain longer, as no frost injures them; in fact, except for use during hard weather, may leave them in the ground all winter. In taking up, care should be taken to get them out with the roots entire, or they are much more liable to rot, while some as the beets, are materially injured in the cooking if mutilated. The tops should be trimmed off just above the crown, and the roots allowed to become dry before storing.

Procure some sand, which should be pretty dry, and lay a thin layer over the place the roots are to occupy. Now lay the roots evenly over this, placing a row all around the outside with the crown outwards. Place on sand sufficient to fill up all cavities and just cover the roots, and so on, alternate roots and sand till the whole is completed. They should not, however, be laid up to a greater height than about three feet.

Cabbage may be preserved in the cellar and in the open ground the former for use during winter—the latter, after the frost breaks. Take a sheltered part of the garden, and upon a trench, in which lay the cabbage, bottom upwards, take out the next trench and lay on these, and so on. A few boards or a little straw should be sprinkled over in hard weather.

Cauliflower and Brocoli, that have not headed before hard weather, should be carefully taken up and laid in mold, in the vegetable cellar or shed. In this way, the luxury may be had a good part of the winter.

Celery, all except the very latest crop, should, just before the ground gets too hard, be lifted and placed in the cellar, tops upwards, a little sanding. Leeks will do in use the greater part of the winter. The last crop may remain in the ground well covered with straw.—[Edward Sanders, in Country Gentleman.

A Hog Story.—The Louisville Journal gets off the following anecdote about hogs:—

"In Madison and other counties, meat and swine are very scarce. Meat abounds, however, in the county of Estill. Many hogs were driven there, which the Estill people consider an infringement on their rights. Councils were called to deliberate how to rid themselves of this nuisance. Many plans were proposed, but finally after a good deal of debate, one was adopted. It seems that hogs have great fears of bears. Accordingly the skin of a bear was procured, and a large sow was procured from one of the droves. She was covered with a bear skin and then let loose. She immediately returned among the droves, and on her approach all the hogs took fright, pursued by the sow with the bear skin. It is stated that since this experiment not a hog has crossed the confines of Estill county.

ON SHEEP.—A late writer in intelligence on this subject—"No farmer can feed ... or sheep profitably, ... ruta-baga, mangel ... or parsnips."

French Burr Mill Stones.

NEARLY TWENTY YEARS EXPERIENCE in the Mill Building business in St. Louis, commencing at the workman's bench, enables us to judge correctly of the quality of burr best adapted to milling in the West. To obtain that quality, we have [illegible] necessary to visit the quarries in France, and there make selections, from which they were selected at the quarries by one of the firm, and samples left with the proprietors, that we may, when we order, be certain of obtaining the desired quality. For successful milling, the practical miller and millwright can appreciate the importance of this arrangement, and can always be sure of burr, and any desired keepers and texture of burr can be obtained without delay.

BOLTING CLOTHS.

To obtain the quality of Bolting Cloth best suited to milling in the West, we have had the greatest facility. Constantly bolts by last sailings, and the large quantities of [illegible] wheat and meal proved so satisfactory to the millers throughout the country, that complaints of mill owners and millers becoming so frequent, we found it necessary to obtain heavy of and the same quality, in order to meet the demand of milling interest. Read the letter from John S. Crump, Grand Saline, Arkansas, Cherokee Nation, bearing date August 10, 1853.

Dr. Easterly—Sir: When I was in your city in March last, I purchased one dozen bottles of your Fever and Ague Killer, which you warranted to me. I have sold seven of the dozen, which I also warranted. Your medicine has given entire satisfaction so far, it having effected several cures of the Chills and Fever. One case particularly—a lady who had been afflicted since the latter part of last summer, and had tried a great many remedies, besides having a physician part of the time, all of which failed. She bought a bottle of your medicine, and before she had used one-third of it, she was entirely cured, and has enjoyed good health ever since. In no case have it failed to effect a permanent cure.

Respectfully yours, John S. Crump.

P. S.—I will be in your place again shortly, and will buy more largely.

N. B. Ask for Dr. Easterly's Fever and Ague Killer, and take no other, and you are safe.

A liberal discount made to wholesale dealers. Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.

For sale at Dr. Easterly's Family Medicine Store, corner of Third and Chestnut streets, St. Louis, also by P. A. Sarpy, St. Mary, and by dealers in medicines generally throughout the west.

WINTER COUGH.

The harsh dry winter cough which afflicts old people and invalids in a low state of health, can be effectually cured by the use of Dr. Carter's Cough Balsam. It warms, moistens and stimulates the whole breathing apparatus, restores and animates the blood, improves the secretive power of the Liver, Spleen and other digestive glands, and the digestive organs, and imparts new life to the weak and convalescent system.

BRONCHITIS

Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, hard cough, a slimy expectoration, with all other symptoms caused by an affection of the bronchial tubes, leading from the throat to the lungs, are speedily and specifically affected and cured by the use of Dr. Carter's Cough Balsam. This is a very painful, wearing and injurious complaint, and always has a powerful tendency to inflame and soften the lungs and thereby induce the more fatal forms of pulmonary disease. He would, at this time, to afflicted, and employ the valuable remedy.

Dr. Easterly—Sir: We take pleasure in informing you that we have sold 36 bottles of your Fever and Ague Killer, and have sold the [illegible] to our patrons, and that it has fully [illegible] a permanent cure in every case. We have sold nearly all the various medicines for ague and fever, but none have given such entire satisfaction as your Fever and Ague Killer. We believe it to be the best medicine now before the public.

it important to keep as an isolated question, we can think of none more important to the people of Nebraska, none more worthy of serious consideration, and of the right time of prompt and efficient action. The entire East, the Southern and the Western States are earnestly discussing the merits for a great national thoroughfare from some desirable point on one of the two great Rivers to the Pacific. The propriety of such a project in the minds of the people of the Eastern and older States, has long since been settled. That is no longer a subject for consideration.— The vast flowing tide of emigration pouring from the East to the West. The lightning-like rapidity with which new Territories become States, and new States become populous and densely populated.— The fast-growing and increasing tendency to expansion and that Westward are its most decisive and convincing proof of the necessity. It would be superfluous to add that the people of America are more progressive than any other people on Earth. Yet it would not be equivocal in an American to say [illegible] [illegible] enterprises are simply the result of necessity taking the place of prophecy. Necessity, however much we deprecate the term, literally, always was and ever will be the long arm of the lever, which will continue to overcome all obstacles in the way of American progress. Almost the first word in our glorious chart of American Independence is necessity. Let the reader follow me enacted in the American Congress before flow of emigration into the Territory drove them from this miserable position. In the language of one worthy the representation it is one of highest-sounding first laws that national as well as individual enterprises should yield to the stern decision, or be overwhelmed by the dread of consequences. Look for a moment at the map of the United States, and what you have published. In vain search of the Ohio and, you do not find what pleases your long [illegible] your reason, until you turn your eyes upon [illegible] the continuous and perfectly connected chain of thoroughfares, leading to many great and fast-growing inland cities in intimate and continual social and commercial intercourse. Commencing at the greatest commercial and manufacturing emporium of the Western Continent, (New York,) the legitimate and pose but this tide can ever be diverted from this direct channel, so well defined and so unmistakably marked out, and already those iron ligaments which are continually binding in one common brotherhood of interest and sympathy the most enlightened and refined cities and communities of the continent, have commenced to reach out Westward, pointing with unerring aim at the heart of Nebraska. The present monetary crisis may retard for a while, but it can never stop so momentous an enterprise, necessity, that all pervading and ever controlling motive power, drives this like all other objects of its creation, to a sure and certain completion. Necessity imperatively demands and reason teaches us that ere long we shall hear the shrill whistle of the locomotive on the East side of the Missouri river. Nature never designed it should stop here, for she has been most unique in her plan laid out upon the face of the country Westward, yet up the beautiful and fertile Platte Valley, with mild and gen-[illegible] which the Platte meanders [illegible] from the far West as if in [illegible] to its source; nature has done more here to facilitate the construction of a Railroad by mild curvatures and gentle grades, than on either side for a thousand miles; this question is one which should be carefully considered by all who have or expect to find homes in Nebraska.

The golden opportunity when time shall present it for the consummation of so grand and glorious a scheme, should never be permitted to come and go without a just appreciation of its importance and a judicious use of all the facilities and advantages nature and circumstances have placed within our reach. If Nebraska is alive and awake to her own highest and best interest, she will have an eye single to this, and then the question of a Pacific Railroad is settled forever.

THE GOVERNOR.

We regret the necessity that has called for remarks so purposely administered by the writer of a communication in another column. We are morally constrained to a way as to be enable to restrain an honest outburst of indignation against an administration that has sought to defeat the will of the people of the Territory, and to frustrate the designs of Congress, giving the people of the Territory, a voice in the laws of the Capital. The Government at Washington never intended the Capital to be located by the Governor, but by the people, the true and only sovereigns. It was for the Governor to conform the will of the people, and not to defeat it.

But we have ample evidence to show that it is the design of the Governor to control the people, and not allow them to carry out their purposes according to their own sense of propriety and justice.

It has been the avowed design of the Governor to get the Capital located by the power of removal before the commencement of the session of the Territorial Legislature, before which the question was to have been tried and would exonerate [illegible] misunderstanding of the Governor.

TERRITORIAL LEGISLATURE

A proclamation has been issued from the Executive Department, ordering the Legislative Assembly to meet at Omaha City, Tuesday January 16th, 1855, eight days later than ordered in a former proclamation. Representations having been received from the Central counties, under the supposition of meeting on the 8th of January, according to previous notice. It would appear that the position of a speculator or rich [illegible] should be about to unduly influence, or [illegible] the mind of the Governor.
Rumoured it is for Bellevue, at which the Omaha City—now for this place, and now for that.

CHRISTMAS AT ST. MARY.—We regret the urgency of those calls of duty that have arisen, compelling us to forego the pleasure of meeting our friends at the hospitable mansion of our highly esteemed German friend, Mr. H. Myers, of St.
Mary. We understand that a large and respectable party of gentlemen and ladies assembled at 3 o'clock, P. M. and after partaking of the refreshments provided for the occasion, the gentlemen engaged in a game of "target shooting," in which a high degree of skill was displayed, and many trophies won. In the evening the party repaired to the "Astor House," kept by another German friend, Mr. Wm. Engel, where the time was spent in the most agreeable manner in convivial enjoyments, theatrical exhibitions and music.

GOVERNMENT SCHOOL.—Government has contracted with the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Mission to school fifty Omaha and thirty Otoe children. They will open a school for the reception of these children at the Omaha and Otoe Mission, at Belleview, on the first day of January, 1855; under the direction of an experienced Missionary teacher, the Rev.
Wm. Hamilton.

NOTICE.—The portrait of Col. BLOWER of Ohio will appear next week, printed in Green.

THE SEAL OF NEBRASKA.—An impression of the great seal of Nebraska, has just been shown us by our esteemed friend E. R. Doyle, Esq., representative elect from Dodge county. It is purely democratic in appearance and sentiment; containing the inscription—"POPULAR SOV-EREIGNTY—FREEDOM." Its emblems consist of the American eagle and the flag of our Union; beneath which is inscribed "COMMITTED UNTO." On the right is a plow and a locomotive; on the left an armed soldier and a steamboat. It is a plain republican seal, destitute of the least degree of the insignia of royalty. If kept in the hands of an upright Executive, and used only to give validity to righteous acts, plain as it is, would excite the veneration and respect of the people.

ROBBERY.—A most daring robbery was committed at the "Land Exchange Office" of Messrs. Cochran & Megrath, at Council Bluffs, on Friday last. The robber in the first place, managed to steal the key to the iron safe of the firm at Cochran & Megrath, and while the proprietors were absent at breakfast, entered the room by the window—opened the safe and relieved it of about $2500. In making his escape, the robber dropped some pieces of gold on the floor, which being discovered, lead to the pursuit and arrest of the robber, and the recovery of the money. The robber made his escape from the bed where he was sleeping with the sheriff out of the chamber window, stole a horse and left town.

JUDICIAL DISTRICTS.—A proclamation has been issued, designating Judges of Probate, Justices of the Peace, Sheriffs, Constables and Clerks, for the several counties. The Territory has been divided into three Judicial Districts. The First district embraces the counties of Douglas and Dodge, which is assigned to Hon. F. Fenglison, Chief Justice. The Second district embraces all that portion of the Territory south of the Platte, and is to be presided over by Hon. E. R. Hard-ten, Associate Justice. The Third district will embrace Washington and Dakota counties, and is assigned to the judicial charge of Hon. James Bradley, Associate Justice.

DISTRICT PROCLAMATIONS.—The Governor has issued a proclamation for the assembling of two regiments of troops, one in the North and the other in the South side of the Platte for the sake of defence against the Indians.

CONVENTION.—We would remind our readers, that there is but a few days more, and that Liberty to the soil of our and the land are sons of good men.
We are in hopes to see the debate next week. Here patiens [illegible].

The year of 1854 begins on Sunday, and
